In these days of instant and ever increasing legislation, the Digest of New Legislation published by the Municipal Journal is more than ever in demand. The busy local government officer may not have time to study every Act concerning his responsibilities and yet he must be fully informed.

Digest of New Legislation is the answer to the problem. Every Act of interest to local government is examined by one of our experienced legal consultants and the digest published normally within ten days from the publication of the Act.

Each Digest has the same headings and marginal notes as the Act, is legally correct and written in clear and concise English.

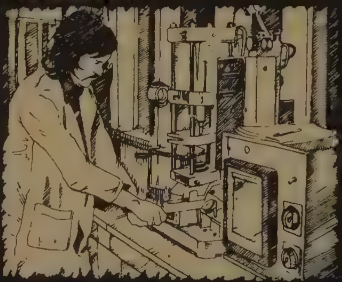
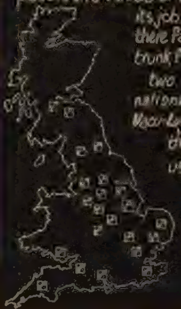
WHEN ONE COMPANY REBUILDS MORE OFF-THE-ROAD TYRES THAN ALL THE OTHERS PUT TOGETHER THERE HAS TO BE A REASON!

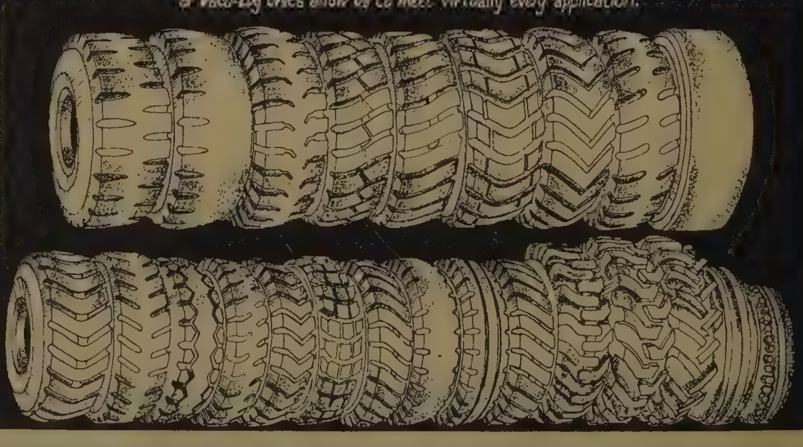
PERHAPS IT'S QUALITY?—As retread industry leaders our good name is our hottest property: we intend to look after it. Our own well equipped quality control Laboratories carry out continual checks at every stage of manufacture, from raw material to finished product.



PERHAPS IT'S SERVICE?—A tyre's place is on a vehicle or machine doing its job. We aim to get it there fast! Fed by our trunk fleet from our two factories, the nationwide chain of Vacu-Lug depots provides the tyre trade and users throughout the U.K. with a service which is second to none.



PERHAPS IT'S PRODUCT RANGE?—The Vacu-Lug Tyre Organisation offers what is probably the most comprehensive range of rebuilt tyres available from any single manufacturer anywhere. The dozens of different patterns, sizes and types of Vacu-Lug units allow us to meet virtually every application.



Of course it's all these things—which, together with reliability and economy, add up to CUSTOMER CONFIDENCE!

And Commission for the New Towns

DEVELOPMENT CORPORATIONS AND COMMISSION FOR THE NEW TOWNS

Scotland

In 1945, the Minister of Town and Country Planning and the Secretary of State for Scotland appointed a committee to consider the general questions of the establishment, development, organisation and administration that would arise in the promotion of new towns in furtherance of a policy of planned decentralisation from congested urban areas. The Committee was asked to suggest guiding principles on which such towns should be established and developed as self-contained and balanced communities for work and living. Within 12 months the Committee submitted 3 reports (2 interim and a final), covering every aspect of the planning and development of new towns.

Many of the Committee's recommendations were embodied in the New Towns Act 1946, which together with most of the subsequent legislation has been consolidated in the New Towns Act 1965. This measure deals with the designation of sites for new towns, the setting up of development corporations, the general objects and powers of development corporations, planning control, acquisition and management of land, financial provisions and other matters with which the corporations are concerned. When a new town is substantially complete, its housing and related assets may be transferred to the district council, as provided for in the New Towns (Amendment) Act 1976. The commercial and industrial assets together with any other remaining property may be transferred to, and managed by, the Commission for the New Towns, as provided for in the earlier legislation.

In England there are 21 new towns, which are sometimes divided into 3 generations. The 11 first generation new towns, were designated between 1946 and 1950. 8 of these—Basildon (Essex), Bracknell (Berks), Crawley (Sussex), Harlow (Essex), Hatfield (Herts), Hemel Hempstead (Herts), Stevenage (Herts) and Welwyn Garden City (Herts)—were designated to help meet London's urgent post-war housing needs. They lie in open country 20–30 miles from London, and have largely and successfully fulfilled the purpose for which they were established. The other 3 towns—Aycliffe and Peterlee (Co Durham), and Corby (Northants)—offered solutions to problems created by the particular needs of local industry.

The second generation, designated between 1961 and 1964, were concerned with urban congestion, and also, being mostly located in development areas with industrial growth. Skelmersdale (Lancs.) and Runcorn (Cheshire) have taken people from Merseyside, Redditch (Worcs.), from Birmingham and the Black Country, and Washington (Tyne and Wear), from Tyneside and Wearside.

The 6 third generation new towns, designated since 1967, were planned at a time when the country's population was expected to increase considerably, and consequently had larger population targets than the earlier new towns. Milton Keynes (Bucks.), Northampton (Northants.) and Peterborough (Cambs.), are about 60 miles from London, and were planned to counteract the Capital's attraction, as well as to take some of its overspill population. Telford (Salop), was planned to take people from the Birmingham area, and Warrington (Cheshire), from the Manchester area. Central Lancashire New Town was planned to provide a substantial economic growth point, and thereby to arrest the migration of people to other regions. Except for Milton Keynes, the third generation towns were based on substantial existing populations; Northampton, Peterborough and Warrington are being developed in partnership with their respective local authorities.

The Secretary of State for the Environment has announced target dates for transferring to the Commission for the New Towns the property of the following Development Corporations: Corby—31 March 1980;

Stevenage—30 June 1980; Harlow—30 September 1980; Runcorn—31 December 1981; Bracknell—31 March 1982; Redditch—30 June 1982; Washington—31 December 1982; Basildon—30 September 1983.

In Wales there are 2 new towns. Cwmbran (in Gwent) serves local industry, and Newtown (in Powys), which is now the responsibility of the Development Board for Rural Wales, will contribute to the economic growth of Central Wales.

In Scotland there are 5 new towns, designated under the new Towns (Scotland) Act 1968. Cumbernauld, East Kilbride, Glenrothes, Irvine and Livingston are mainly designed to relieve overcrowding in Glasgow.

This section also makes reference to 2 projects which, although not development corporations within the context of the New Towns Acts, are of sufficient magnitude to justify inclusion.

Aycliffe was the first new town designated in the North of England. The original target was for a population of only 10,000 on a green field site of 865 acres. Subsequent redesignation in 1966 set the target at 45,000 and the designated area of 2,508 acres. In 1973 Aycliffe Industrial Estate (575 acres) was acquired from the English Industrial Estates Corporation and added to the designated area.

By March 1978 Aycliffe had provided homes for 27,000 people and jobs for 12,000, nearly 10,000 in industry, and the remainder in commerce and services. The town has 110 shops, 80 in the centre and the others located in housing areas. 18 schools provide places for some 8,000 children.

Aycliffe's recreational facilities are outstanding. A purpose built indoor sports centre operated by the District Council has provision for a full range of wet and dry sports—including swimming, squash, cricket and golf practice, badminton and gymnastics. This has now been augmented by an outdoor sports complex of 55 acres developed by Great Aycliffe Town Council.

The local government functions in the town are the responsibility of the Durham County Council (Chief Executive and Clerk: J. Proctor, County Hall, Durham), Sedgefield District Council (Chief Executive—A. J. Roberts, Council Offices, Green La., Spennymoor, Co. Durham) and Great Aycliffe Town Council (Town Clerk—J. D. Present population 92,250 planned ultimate population approximately 130,000. At 31st March 1977 approximately 22,200 dwellings had been built by the Corporation. In addition, houses for owner-occupation had been provided and over 5,000 rented houses sold to sitting tenants. Over 200 factories with a floor area of 6,605,000 sq. ft. had been constructed, giving employment to some 22,550 persons; approximately 2,500 persons were also employed at the Ford Motor Company's Engineering Research Centre immediately adjacent to the designated area. Further factories and extensions were under construction. 394 shops (205 in the Town Centre) had been built, together with churches, community buildings, libraries, public houses, etc. In the Town Centre, a Marks & Spencer store and a department store had been completed, together with office blocks and the town's first multi-storey car park. In addition, a large office block associated with the Town Centre railway station had been completed. Plans for the inclusion of a new shop and office development will mean an increase of the present Town Centre by some 50%. This development will include a large store of 135,000 sq. ft. for SavaCentre, a jointly-owned subsidiary of Sainsbury's and British Home Stores. At Pitsea Main Centre, a large Sainsbury's store had been opened; other shops and an office block had been completed. The Centre incorporates the Pitsea Market. Nearby, building works are well underway for a massive Tesco store of 127,000 sq. ft., due to open mid 1978.

Amenities already available in the town include twin cinemas, golf course, swimming pool and a temporary theatre with a hall seating 500 people. The first phase of a Family Recreation Centre, including a 120 bedroom hotel, public house, country club, zoo and ecology centre, ski slope, par 3 golf course, and a large artificial lake for fishing and boating, etc., has been completed, and a large indoor riding school has also been opened. Bracknell—a small market centre west of London, with a population of 5,000 when designated—has now exceeded the target population of the first stage of its development, namely 25,000, the present total being 46,000. As a result of an extension of the area to 3,285 acres, the target population is now 60,000. The area will be encircled by a belt of countryside devoted to agriculture and forestry and separated from the development of Greater London by such permanent open spaces as Ascot Heath, Windsor Great Park and Virginia Water.

By 31st March 1977, 12,676 dwellings had been completed in the designated area, 11,114 of which had been built by the Corporation. 240,446 sq. metres of industrial development for both manufacturing and service industry had been completed together with 70,124 sq. metres of lettable office space. 53,395 sq. metres of lettable retail floor space and 70 market stalls. There are twelve new churches, seven community centres and three youth centres in use. Twenty-three new schools (including three comprehensives and one special school) provide some 11,500 places and a College of Further Education is attended by a total of 9,324 students, approximately 550 of whom study on a full time basis. An additional primary school is under construction. The District Council's Sports Centre incorporates a swimming pool complex and is used for a great many activities including international sporting events. South Hill Park Trust operates a very successful Arts Centre incorporating cinema, recital room, studios and craft workshops.

During the financial year 1976/77, work commenced on 783 dwellings for the Coporation. Three multi-storey car parks are now in use.

The future of the New Town has been reviewed by Mr. Peter Shore, the Secretary of State, as a result of his examination of the Outline Plan proposals and his general review of New Towns' policy. The scope of the project has now been re-defined to cater for an increase in the population of the area from all causes of 40,000 by the mid-1980s. Development will not take place on about 7,000 of the 35,000 acres of land designated.

The designated area enjoys a superb strategic location lying astride the M6 motorway and with the M61 motorway providing part of the eastern boundary. It is also astride the London and Glasgow main railway line. The area is also fortunate in having its own port at Preston dock.

Corby was designated a New Town on 1st April 1950 and the Development Corporation was established on 10th May of the same year. The area designated was about 2,700 acres with a population at that time of about 15,000. The Corporation's target was to be a population of 40,000 with natural growth continuing thereafter by a further 15,000. In 1960, however, it transpired that the main industry of the town, the steelworks, was to expand further. To meet the requirements of the projected population increase, the Minister of Housing and Local Government enlarged the Designated Area in 1963 by some 1,600 acres to the south of the town, and the Designated Area is now capable of accommodating 83,000 persons. In late 1968, a further area of about 130 acres especially suitable for industry was designated. The Corporation's Master Plan for the extension area and for the necessary expansion of the town centre for the larger population was submitted to the Minister of Housing and Local Government in July 1965, and received approval in principle the following year. The present population is about 53,500.

With some 16,850 houses now built, the town has passed its first stage of housing growth; and the Town Centre, commenced in 1954, is now completed to the stage for which it was first planned. As well as some 110 shops it includes a forty-bedroom hotel, library, police station, courthouse, technical college, central health clinic, bus station and the civic centre buildings of the District Council. These comprise a covered swimming bath, squash courts, sauna/solarium, theatre, dance/concert hall, civic offices and council chamber. In 1969 work commenced on a major extension to the town centre which was completed in 1972, with nearly half as many additional shops, a multi-storey car park for 600 cars, a new covered bus station, and a further 100,000 sq. ft. of lettable office space has been added to the 103,000 sq. ft. of offices which have already been built to meet both the local needs and the requirements of an increasing number of national firms who find the benefit of location in an expanding Midlands town, which is only about 80 miles from Central London. At that date, the whole of the shopping area, new and existing, became all pedestrian.

Concurrently, with the development of housing and the town centre, many new schools, churches, public houses and new roads have been built for the needs of this young and lively population; and with them some 79 new factories to provide work, partly as an alternative for men, but hitherto mainly for women and girls whose menfolk are employed at the steelworks. However, with the nationalization of the steel industry, and new methods of working to reduce manpower, the expected expansion of the steelworks has been cancelled and for the first time in its history, the Corporation is having to find other employment each year for the majority of its incoming factory workers. In June 1967, negotiations were concluded with the Greater London Council for Corby to participate in the London Overspill Industrial Selection Scheme. Further land has been set aside for new industries, and the stage is set for a major industrial expansion independent of the steel industry.

Under the provisions of the New Towns (Amendment) Act 1976, the Development Corporation transferred their stock of rented housing and related assets to the Corby District Council on 31st March 1978. However, the Development Corporation is continuing in being to manage their commercial and industrial properties. It is anticipated that this management function will become the responsibility of the Commission for the New Towns on 31 March 1980.

183 shops have also been provided in neighbourhood centres. 16 new public houses have been built and there are two well-appointed hotels, the Churchgate and the Saxon Inn.

The Princess Alexandra hospital (440 beds) was opened in 1965 and a psychiatric unit added in 1967.

There are 26 primary schools, 3 special and 8 comprehensive secondary schools opened so far. The County Council has also provided a Technical College in The High which was opened in 1958. Youth centres have been established in five of the large secondary schools and Adult Education Centres in four. There are 5 branch libraries and a central library.

There are 6 community associations; 4 with their own headquarters. In addition they administer 18 small community halls and common rooms which are used for meetings and social gatherings of many kinds. There are over 500 voluntary organizations, some of which have their own premises. These include the Y.W.C.A.'s residential club for young people.

Public playing fields, playbarns and playgrounds have been provided throughout the town by the District Council. There is an indoor swimming pool and a cafe boathouse on the river.

The Harlow Sportcentre comprises a large indoor sports hall, an international standard running track and athletics arena, football stadium, cricket and hockey pitches, tennis courts, squash courts and sauna bath. Recent extensions include additional squash courts and an artificial ski-slope. Canons Brook 18-hole golf course was opened in 1963.

Transfer of the Corporation's property to the Commission for the New Towns is scheduled for 30th September, 1980.

Milton Keynes lies alongisde the M1 Motorway, 50 miles from Central London and 60 miles from Birmingham: the Grand Union Canal and the London/Crewe main line railway both pass through the area. The local authority is the Milton Keynes Borough Council.

Milton Keynes has a first class location and provides an attractive alternative, in both homes and employment, to the pressures of the Greater London area which it was designated to relieve. Development is progressing rapidly and construction of the first phase of the new city centre shopping area opens in 1979. The existing population of the area is about 86,000, the largest settlement being in Bletchley with a population of over 30,000. The new city will accommodate a population of 150,000 by about 1986: the Secretary of State for the Environment announced, in April 1977, a revised ultimate population of 200,000.

The Plan for Milton Keynes was published by the Development Corporation in March 1970. Following a public inquiry the Plan was accepted by the Secretary of State in May 1971.

Northampton is one of the third generation of New Town Corporations formed for the purpose of expanding an existing large town under the New Towns Act of 1965. The planned expansion is intended principally to accommodate and provide work for overspill population from London. The Master Plan for the development of the designated area was published in November 1969 and followed by a public inquiry in February 1970 was accepted by the Secretary of State for the Environment in September 1971.

Since the start of building operations in 1970 over 8,700 houses to rent, and 4,400 for sale have been completed; 455,000m² of factories and warehouses, 76,000m² of shops and 112,000m² of offices have been completed.

The development scheme is being undertaken in partnership with the Northamptonshire County Council and Northampton Borough Council, the latter being responsible for the redevelopment of the town centre and the provision of engineering services.

The new town of Peterlee is situate mid-way between the Tees and the Wear. The original designated area of 2,350 acres, extended by a further 449 acres, occupies the heart of the Easington District which is one of the largest in the country and has a population of 82,000 people. It is in relation to this scattered pattern that Peterlee is being planned.

Peterlee was designated on a green-field site to provide modern homes for the miners of the surrounding pit villages; a commercial, social and recreational centre for the sub-region and employment for the wives and families of miners. With the decline in the coal industry in the early 1960s the employment emphasis changed to providing jobs for the men in the region.

By March 1978, over 8,000 dwellings, 200 shops, one residential hotel, six public houses, three licensed clubs, one grammar+technical school, 17 primary and three comprehensive schools, one technical college, one sports and social centre and four churches dedicated for worship were completed. Schools in the town are organised along comprehensive lines.

A striking feature of the town is the South West Area; this area forms an urban layout recognizing the effect of the motor car in the present age, carefully integrated with a rural landscape of great beauty and has aroused favourable comment in architectural circles. The area was designed by artist Victor Pasmore.

In the town centre a fire station, library, health centre, post office, youth club, divisional police station, petty sessional court, telephone exchange, two filling stations, public conveniences, pedestrian underpasses, a total of 122 shops, a car showroom, nightclub premises, an arts and information centre, a multistorey car park and a five-storey office block have been completed. An ambulance depot and a children's day nursery are in use and an Old People's Home has been opened through the agency of the Durham County Council. A new 68,000 sq. ft. department store and 36,000 sq. ft. office development was completed in 1975 in the town centre. In 1978 a new sports and leisure centre to provide recreational facilities for the town and the sub-region was completed. It includes swimming pool with sauna and solarium facilities, two sports halls, squash courts, fitness rooms and creche, etc. A community hall, theatre and cinema are planned for the future.

Forty-two industries provide employment for over 5,000 people on the two industrial estates. In all more than 2m sq. ft. of factory space is in use. Companies range from food, clothing and service industries employing two women to one man to chemical and engineering with labour forces of seven men to one woman. Industry has been attracted from elsewhere in the U.K. and in the last two years from Italy, Japan, Germany, the U.S.A. and Scandinavia. I.B.M.(U.K.) Ltd. have established a scientific centre involved in research and development.

A Community Association has been established and one large community centre and two neighbourhood centres have been provided by the Development Corporation to meet the needs of the 27,500 population.

The focal point is Worcester Square, a large enclosed space which, like the shopping arcades, is climatically controlled, and is used for exhibitions and promotional activities. Royal Square contains an 85-stall open market, with surrounding shops and offices and a Food Hall managed by the District Council. The shopping malls are linked at one level to a 620 space multi storey car park and the Transport Interchange (which combines bus/rail/taxi facilities) and a 130-space multi storey car park for shop and office workers. Adjacent to the open market is a 950 space multistorey car park opened in 1977.

Public Transport: The "Reddibus" concept, with buses running on a reserved route through the eastern area of the town, has proved very successful.

Cwmbran is the first new town to be established in Wales and is located in the Borough of Torfaen in the County of Gwent. The master plan for the new town was approved by the Minister in 1951. It has proved a sound foundation upon which the town has developed to reach its present population of about 45,000. The Secretary of State for Wales has announced his intention to approve an expansion of the town in the South West area.

At April 1978, 9,266 dwellings had been completed of which 1,013 have been sold. The Corporation had also leased 602 plots to private householders.

Engineering projects include river, railway and canal crossings for principal roads. Two river bridges, five railway bridges and two canal crossings have been completed.

The dual carriageway by-pass road for Trunk Road A.4042 has been constructed on the eastern side of the town. This new length of road is designed to link up in due course with the M5 (Midlands) motorway, and the M4 (South Wales) motorway. A new road, Cwmbran Drive, is also planned to serve the town and the north-south flow of traffic.

The Town Centre provides all-pedestrian, traffic free, under-cover shopping precincts. Extensive car parks, including four multi-storey and one underground, provide 4,000 free parking speces. 180 shop units have been completed including three large stores, Woolco (9,475m^2) built above a multi-storey car park to accommodate 900 vehicles; Sainsbury (4,459m^2) with car parking accommodation for 550 vehicles on three floors above and Marks and Spencer (4,913m^2).

Built within the town centre perimeter are several large buildings for office accommodation, central health office, a three-cinema complex and bingo hall, theatre, social club, restaurants, open-air and indoor market, central bus station, blocks of flats including a 22-storey block, Wales' tallest residential building, a Police Sub-Divisional Headquarters with adjoining Magistrates' Court and a district heating plant serving most of the town centre. Future plans include provision for a hotel and further shops and office developments.

Gwent County Council have their headquarters at Cwmbran, adjacent to the Gwent Constabulary headquarters at Croesyceiliog.

An Arts Trust has been formed with the support of local industrialists to sponsor the provision of tangible works of art for the public benefit of the town. The Corporation has established a 'home for the arts' and societies meeting place in the town centre. A community building has been provided in the Fairwater area for the local residents' association. Three new social halls have been completed at Hollybush, Greenmeadow and Llanyravon.

Some 16,930 people are employed in Cwmbran with about 6,246 being employed as a result of Corporation building. Large-scale industrial development is still proceeding.

The Gwent County Council's school building programme has kept pace with the developments, making 12,700 school places available. Comprehensive schools have full-scale leisure centres, available to the public out of school hours.

Two Methodist churches, a Roman Catholic church and one for the Assemblies of God have been built, these being additional to a number of existing churches in older parts of the town.

There are three 'Community Colleges' for adult use attached to schools. There are also active community associations, the Corporation have co-operated with them in the erection of local meeting halls. The Corporation are sponsoring or otherwise assisting in the formation of new societies and associations. Five nursery play groups for children under school age have so far been established. Torfaen Borough Council and Cwmbran Development Corporation have equally shared the cost of providing a 4½-acre boating lake at the southern end of the central recreation area.

The local authority has built a sports stadium on Henllys Way which is the only one in Wales to have track and jump facilities to full international standards. It also incorporates indoor swimming pool, sports hall, sauna suite, etc.

The first purpose-built police training centre, serving the whole of Wales, is fully operational at Greenmeadow.

Ten new public houses have been completed and further new licensed premises will be erected as and when required. Unique in Wales, a combined public house and community centre has been completed at the Fairwater Square shopping centre. A residential hotel has been extended at Llanyravon.

DEVELOPMENT BOARD FOR RURAL WALES: On April 1, 1977, the Mid Wales Development Corporation was dissolved and its responsibilities taken over by the Development Board for Rural Wales (established under the Development of Rural Wales Act 1976).

The Development Board for Rural Wales is responsible for the economic and social development of Rural Wales.

It is intended that 80 per cent of the planned population will come from Glasgow. At 31st March 1977, 13,000 dwellings were completed and occupied, while 1,000 dwellings are under construction. The present population is 43,000.

An industrial directory of over 180 firms established in the New Town is available from the Corporation's Public Relations Officer.

General: East Kilbride, the first of the Scottish new towns, became a small burgh in May, 1963, and a large burgh in May 1967. It became part of the East Kilbride District of Strathclyde Region in May 1975 in the reorganization of local government in Scotland.

The town is situated in the Clyde valley region, about nine miles south of Glasgow. The New Town was established to ease Glasgow's post-war housing problems and to broaden the economy of the West of Scotland, previously dependent on the traditional "heavy" industries of coal mining, shipbuilding and engineering. Industrial and commercial expansion in the New Town has been so successful, that East Kilbride is recognized now as the foremost growthpoint in Scotland.

The areas designated as the site of the New Town is 10,250 acres, of which some 5,700 acres will remain as a green belt to the north-west of the built-up area of about 4,550 acres. More than 21,720 Development Corporation dwellings were completed and occupied at 31st March 1978: this figure includes 2,969 houses in the new residential area of Greenhills.

At the time of designation the original villages of East Kilbride and Maxwellton had a population of 2,400. East Kilbride is now the sixth largest town or city in Scotland, with a population of over 76,500 and 800 acres of industrial estates accommodating 340 manufacturing and service firms in a total factory space of 605,491 sq. m. Total employment in the town at the end of March, 1978, was 31,600 of which 18,960 were in industry.

The Birniehill site, covering 71 acres is occupied by the National Engineering Lboratory, the Government's mechanical engineering research and development establishment for the whole of the United Kingdom, together with the Birniehill Institute which organizes regular conferences on the work carried out by the NEL for industry; and by the Scottish Universities Research Reactor Centre, the Scottish Laboratory of the Building Research Establishment, the Property Services Agency of the Department of the Environment, and the Scottish branch of the Warren Spring Laboratory of the Department of Trade and Industry. Between them they occupy 640,000 sq. ft. of laboratory buildings.

With the completion of the £10 million Plaza development in the 60 acre town centre area now has 122 shops and 55,805 sq. m. office accommodation. The Plaza, a complex of stores, shops, tower office block and a multi-storey car park with free parking for 1,250 cars, represents the third and most extensive stage of town centre development and has elevated East Kilbride to the status of a truly regional shopping centre.

Also situated in the town centre is the Inland Revenue multi-storey computer centre Centre 1 which handles the PAYE system for the whole of Scotland. There are two residential hotels, a ballroom, a cinema seating 1,000, an Olympic-length swimming pool, the Civic Centre- the headquarters of East Kilbride District Council, a youth centre, health centre, crown post office, police headquarters, fire station and library. A third hotel and conference centre is planned.

There are six neighbourhood shopping centres in each of the residential areas. In addition, sixteen small groups of shops have been built.

Four secondary schools and 22 primary schools have been completed. Another two secondary schools are under construction. Twenty churches have been added to the three which existed before designation, and one more is under construction.

Four large public recreation areas are equipped with tennis courts, football pitches, rugby pitch, cricket pitch, bowling greens, running track and appropriate pavilions. The facilities also include a nine-hole pitch and putt course. There are four golf courses (three private and one municipal) a large indoor sports centre which was built by the Town Council, and a private sports club. The Town Centre Park contains a boating pond, a paddling pool and Himalayan putting green.

Enquiries: Enquiries from industrialists and developers of commercial and retail properties are welcomed and should be addressed to the Managing Director of the East Kilbride Development Corporation.

The town occupies a central position in the Kingdom of Fife. On 30th June 1948, 5,760 acres of land were designated for development. There was an existing population within this area of approximately 1,150 persons.

The purpose of Glenrothes New Town is to extend the industrial belt of Scotland eastwards to assist in dealing with unemployment problems in the area and to participate to a certain extent in overspill population from Glasgow. The minimum target population is at present 55,000 with natural growth thereafter to 70,000.

Glenrothes has ample industrial land available for development. There are 5 major industrial estates:

1. Queensway Industrial Estate of approximately 45 acres at present accommodating 29 industries.
2. Viewfield Industrial Estate of approximately 112 acres and accommodating 12 industries.
3. Eastfield Industrial Estate of approximately 93 acres and accommodating 26 industries.
4. Southfield Industrial Estate of approximately 414 acres accommodating 25 industries.
5. Whitehill Industrial Estate of approximately 54 acres accommodating 49 industries.

The sites are adjacent to housing and shopping and give easy access to road, rail, sea and air communications.

The population of the New Town (March 1977) was 33,900 with 10,550 houses completed.

Irvine New Town, the only British New Town with a seaside frontage, was designated in 1966 and covers 12,480 acres. Its population at designation was 34,600, and the target for the late 1990's is 120,000. It is situated on the Firth of Clyde some 30 miles south west of Glasgow and incorporates the Ancient Burghs of Irvine and Kilwinning and a number of smaller communities. Since Local government reorganization in 1975, it has been the headquarters of Cunninghame District Council.

By mid 1978, the Corporation had built over 4,000 houses for rent and almost 800 for sale. Industry has also been expanded in parallel with housing development. Compared with about 50 companies at the time of designation, the New Town by mid 1978 contained over 200 industrial concerns, including Swedish, Swiss, American, Canadian and Australian companies. Products include light and heavy engineering equipment, electrical and electronic components, textiles, clothing and carpets, chemicals, heavy goods vehicles and buses, glass bottles, fork lift trucks, golf equipment, valves and bearings, optics, audio visual and phonograph equipment and equipment for the oil and gas producing industry. A high proportion of the community is also engaged in the production of explosives and man-made fibres in an adjacent factory site at Ardeer.

Being an industrial centre located in the heart of a resort area of great scenic beauty, the New Town has considerable potential for the attraction of tourists. This is being developed not only as a seasonal tourist industry in itself, but also to provide much higher amenities and recreation facilities for the permanent population than would normally be possible in the earlier stages of a New Town development.

Magnum, the largest Leisure Centre in Europe, costing in excess of £3m, and containing swimming pools, skating and curling rinks, indoor bowling, a theatre/cinema/conference complex, and a complete range of facilities for indoor sports and pursuits of all kinds, was opened in October, 1976. Already it has attracted over 2 million visitors from all parts of the country.

The Centre is located in the heart of a 150 acre Beach Park reclaimed from former industrial wasteland and now landscaped with artificial lochs and picnic areas. In addition, the nearby harbour is being excavated and improved to provide facilities for all types of aquatic sports and activities.

At Kilwinning, the existing Eglinton Park is being expanded to create a 1,700-acre country park which will include facilities for sailing, pony trekking, nature trails, a garden and caravan centre, as well as an additional three golf courses. Linear parks are being created along the banks of the four rivers which flow through the New Town.

In the commercial field, the Corporation completed in April, 1974, a shopping and office complex at Bridgegate providing 22,500 sq. ft. of shops and 32,000 sq. ft. of offices.

In late 1975, in partnership with Ravenseft and Murrayfield Scottish Investments Ltd., the first phase of a new Town Centre was completed. This contains some 450,000 sq. ft. of shopping space, totally enclosed and spanning the River Irvine. The shopping mall is centrally heated and air conditioned. Landscaping, with trees, shrubs and plants, has been carried out extensively inside and around the building.

A complete new system of distributor and service roads for the whole area was substantially completed in 1975, and a new 7 mile by-pass to carry the main Greenock-Ayr trunk route was opened in March, 1976.

The development of bus-only "community routes" using many of the original country lanes and routes began in mid 1976 with the opening of the by-pass. These Community Routes are designed to provide a link between the new areas of high density housing and the industrial estates. Factories and houses are separated from each other by the new road system and are largely screened by landscaping and new earthworks.

When completed, Irvine will be the largest New Town in Scotland, both in population and acreage.

Livingston was established to create a new focus of industrial activity in the central belt of Scotland and thereby link the industrial west with centres of expansion in the Forth basin.

The site of Livingston, as designated in the New Town (Livingston) Designation Order 1962, made on 16th April 1962, comprises an area of 6,692 acres lying in the parishes of Uphall, Livingston and Bathgate in the District of West Lothian and including the existing villages of Livingston and Livingston Station, and in the parish of Midcalder. The target population is 70,000 by 1990 rising to 100,000 by the end of the century.

The site situated some 15 miles west of Edinburgh and 29 miles east of Glasgow, on the main trunk road (M8) linking the two cities, is undulating from the central feature of Dechmont Law in the north, through the valley of the River Almond to the slightly rising ground to the south and lies in the centre of an area of some 10 square miles, the rehabilitation of which has been the subject of a report, "The Lothians Regional Survey and Plan".

At the end of June 1978 the population had risen from 2,000 to about 34,000. More than 100 new industries were operating.

Letchworth Garden City Corporation was constituted as a public authority under the Letchworth Garden City Corporation Act 1962 and on 1 January 1963 acquired the Letchworth estate of First Garden City Ltd., the company which founded the town.

The objects of the Corporation are to manage, develop and extend the undertaking as a public service and the Act provides all powers necessary to enable it to carry out these and any purposes incidental thereto.

The Letchworth Urban District Council promoted the Bill which resulted in the 1962 Act and the Corporation has the power to precept on the Council (now the North Hertfordshire District Council) in any year in which the defined expenditure exceeds the revenues of the Corporation. (Defined expenditure includes any working, establishment or maintenance expenses, interest on borrowed money and provision for the repayment of borrowed money.) Conversely, future surplus revenues must be used for the benefit of Letchworth or for any purpose which the Corporation may deem to be a requisite public service.

Letchworth, as the first garden city of this country, was founded in 1903 by a registered public company known as First Garden City Limited and was developed pursuant to principles laid down by Sir Ebenezer Howard. It was a pioneer experiment in the marriage of town and country, industry and agriculture and its example has been followed in the New Towns. The vesting of the garden city estate at Letchworth in a statutory corporation established an unusual, if not unique, situation in that the estate is managed as a public service on behalf of the community.

The freehold estate comprises some 4,348 acres of land. Some 2,500 acres form an agricultural belt surrounding the built-up area and of this 1,850 acres are farmed direct by the Corporation.

The built-up area has been developed over the 75 years of its existence for residential, industrial, commercial and other uses. There are at present some 4,000 ground rent leases and the Corporation owns over 325 industrial, commercial and residential premises.

Current developments include a partnership agreement with Wates Ltd. for the development of approximately 100 acres of land to produce some 700 homes for sale and in conjunction with the Laing Development Co. Ltd., the Corporation has recently developed as a pedestrian shopping precinct a 6½-acre site in the town centre, and the erection of extensions to factory premises.

The Corporation has a management scheme under the Leasehold Reform Act 1967.

Letchworth Garden City Electrical Installations, a department of the Corporation, is one of the foremost electrical contractors in Hertfordshire and neighbouring counties.

Subsidiary to the Corporation is Letchworth Cottages and Buildings Limited, a charitable housing society, which owns nearly 300 cottages, flats and garages.

THAMESMEAD: Although not a New Town within the meaning of the New Towns Acts, the magnitude of Thamesmead merits its inclusion in the Section.

The Greater London Council is developing a site of 1,500 acres in the London Boroughs of Bexley and Greenwich to rehouse around 48,000 Londoners by the 1990s.

The first three areas, 4,417 dwellings, are now complete, including 258 owner occupied houses. A further 742 dwellings (262 owner occupied) are almost ready for handover. Preliminary work has started on the last section of the Principal Traffic Route which will serve the proposed Central Area; it is hoped to have the first shops open in the mid 1980's.

The major part of the commission's work is to secure the audit of the accounts of the Local Authorities in Scotland, and of a number of associated public boards. This work is carried out through the Controller of Audit who is appointed by the Commission for this purpose, and who, under the provisions of the Act, makes an annual report to the Commission.

The Commission's other main functions are to hold hearings as necessary on matters reported to them by the Controller of Audit, to make appropriate recommendations to the Secretary of State and to local authorities in respect of such matters, and to advise the Secretary of State on any matter relating to the accounts of local authorities, and/or which he may refer to them.

Meetings of the Commission take place at approximately monthly intervals and some have been held at the headquarters of the larger authorities in order to maintain close contact with local authority members. The costs of the Commission are mainly shared under an agreed formula among the Regional and Islands Councils, although there is a small direct grant from central government funds.

The Commission is empowered either to appoint firms of accountants to carry out the audits or to have the accounts audited by directly employed staff. Agent firms have been appointed to audit approximately 80% by value of local authority accounts leaving the remainder to be audited by staff directly employed by the Commission. A list of authorities and auditors appears below.

As well as acting as adviser to the Commission the Controller provides general guidance and information for the appointed auditors. The firms of professional accountants who accepted appointments from the Commission were required to change from the hitherto traditional approach to the audit of local authority accounts in Scotland, which to a large extent had been forced upon the auditors of the former authorities by restrictive regulations, and to adopt the much wider and more systematic approach necessary to meet the requirements of the new statute in which all aspects of a local authority's activities might be examined for such waste, extravagance and inefficiency as may be found, as well as for the form and regularity of the accounts and the security of assets.

REORGANIZATION OF LOCAL GOVERNMENT IN SCOTLAND

In a White Paper (Cmnd 4583) published in February 1971 the Government set out its proposals (based on the recommendations of a Royal Commission (under the chairmanship of Lord Wheatley) which forms the basis of the Local Government (Scotland) Act 1973. The Act came into force on 16th May, 1975.

The numbers and types of local authorities in Scotland were:

County Councils	33
City and Burgh Councils	201
District Councils	197

These councils were abolished and reorganization resulted in the creation of:

1. Regional Authorities. Nine regional councils were established with executive powers and resources for dealing with strategic planning including the use of resources, transportation and roads, industrial development, police, fire, education and social work.

Orkney Shetland and the Western Isles, because of their separate identity and remoteness from the mainland, became virtually all-purpose authorities.

2. District Councils. Fifty-three district councils were established which are responsible for local planning, housing, local health and amenity services and building control.

The regional authorities in the Highlands, the Borders and Dumfries and Galloway are to be responsible for public libraries, but elsewhere the districts will undertake this function.

3. Community Councils. Any community which wishes to set up a community council will, with the approval of the Secretary of State, be enabled to do so. Such councils will, however, be optional and will not have statutory functions.

Election of Councillors

Ordinary elections of councillors will take place on the first Tuesday in May. The next election for district councils will be in 1980 and for regional and islands councils in 1982. The term of office for councillors will be for four years.

Each council consists of a chairman and councillors. The title of Lord Provost will attach to the chairman of each of the district councils of the Cities of Aberdeen, Dundee, Edinburgh and Glasgow.

Prevention of River Pollution

River purification boards established under the Rivers (Prevention of Pollution) (Scotland) Acts 1951 and 1965 were abolished.

The Secretary of State has by order divided Scotland into areas known as river purification board areas for each of which a board has been established. (See Section 28).

Members of a board are appointed as to one third from among their own members by regional councils within the area, one third similarly by district councils and one third by the Secretary of State.

Water

Regional water boards established under the Water (Scotland) Act 1967 were abolished and their functions transferred with minor exceptions, to water authorities which are the regional or islands councils of the respective areas. (See Section 28).

CONVENTION OF SCOTTISH LOCAL AUTHORITIES

This is an association of local authorities in Scotland, established for the purposes set out under "Objects" below. It was established in 1975, following the passing of the Local Government (Scotland) Act 1973 which reorganized local government in Scotland.

Constitution

All the Regional, Islands and District Authorities in Scotland have become members of the Convention. The Convention meets four times a year but the day to day business is conducted by the Executive and Policy Committees established to cater not only for the common policies of local authorities in Scotland but also the policies which are appropriate to the types of authority.

Objects

The objects of the Convention are firstly, to watch over, protect and promote the respective interests, rights, powers and duties of its member authorities as these may be affected by legislation or proposed legislation or otherwise; secondly, to provide a forum for the discussion of matters of concern to its member authorities and to obtain, consider and disseminate information on matters of importance and interest to member authorities; and thirdly, to provide in conjunction, where appropriate, with the other local authority associations in the United Kingdom, such essential services for its members as it may consider to be appropriate.

President

Tom Clarke (Monklands).

Secretary and Offices

The Secretary, G. H. Speirs, MA, LLB, 3 Forres St., Edinburgh, EH3 6BL (031 225 1626/7).

DEFINITION OF AREA

The region comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 16th May, 1975:
the county of Berwick;
the county of Peebles;
the county of Roxburgh.
the county of Selkirk;
in the county of Midlothian:
the electoral division of Heriot and Stow

In contrast to other Regions in Scotland, the Borders Region contains no city or major town to serve as a magnet for its shopping, administrative, employment or cultural functions. The 1971 population of the Region was 98,500, and within the entire region there are only ten settlements exceeding 1,500 population and containing 58% of the Regional population, leaving some 40,000 persons living in the landward area. The economy is based largely on high quality textiles and agriculture, but for many years the Region's vitality has been sapped by depopulation, particularly of the younger and better educated. Some 10,000 people left the Region between 1951 and 1971, but in contrast to the fifties and sixties, jobs have become available in the last few years for incoming workers. Housing has become the key issue in the Region's development, and despite recent improvements in the number of available properties, the owner occupier sector has suffered fierce competition from retired couples, second home-owners and, in Peebles particularly, Edinburgh commuters. There is no shortage of land with planning permission for housing, and last year work began on the Region's largest single development at Tweedbank which will contain·up to 1,000 S.S.H.A. houses, as well as 30 acres set aside for industrial development. In parts of the Region, particularly in the Ettrick and Yarrow valleys, forestry now stands alongside farming as a major land use. In the last ten years the substantial Forestry Commission holdings have been supplemented by an increasing proportion of land planted and managed by commercial forestry groups, with significant implications for future employment prospects, subsidiary industries and recreation (the last named a large relatively untapped resource)

DEFINITION OF AREA

The region comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 16th May 1975:
the county of Dumfries;

the county of Kirkcudbright;
the county of Wigtown.

The region covers an area of 2,460 square miles (637,006 hectares) and is comparatively sparsely populated. Within its boundaries it contains almost every type of scenery normally associated with Scotland, from the hills and moors of the 250-square-mile Glen Trool National Park to the 200 miles of coastline indented by estuaries and bays. Sixty per cent of the area is mountainous moorland and the population lives mainly in the coastal plain and the river valleys. The Glasgow–Carlisle trunk-road, A74, the most important road link between Scotland and England, skirts the eastern fringe of the region and from it, across the breadth of the region, runs the Gretna–Stranraer A75 trunk road. This road passes through the centres of population of Annan, Dumfries, Castle Douglas, Gatehouse of Fleet and Newton Stewart to end at Stranraer, the port for the shortest sea route to Ireland, and is an important link between Europe and Ireland. Most other centres lie within 15 miles of the A75 but although it is estimated that 95% of the total population lives within this communication corridor there is, nevertheless, a good network of principal and lesser roads serving the whole region. The climate is the mildest in Scotland and in the west, where subtropical plants can be seen in some gardens; the mean monthly temperatures are the same as in Cornwall.

Dumfries and Galloway has been lived in since prehistory and the region is rich in archaeological, historic and literary associations. Earthworks, standing stones, peel towers, castles, abbeys, monuments and memorials abound, bearing witness to a past often turbulent and stormy. The region, however, does not cater only for those interested in history. The countryside and seaside are relatively unspoiled and the visitor in his different capacities is well looked after. There is plenty of good accommodation. There are caravan and camping sites and there is ample room throughout the region for sport and recreation of all sorts.

Agriculture is the most important single industry in the region and agriculture and forestry occupy most of the land area. There is, however, a wide and varied range of manufacturing industries and much of the population is employed in service industries. The percentage of unemployed is high although the actual figure is small. The whole region is a Development Area and therefore eligible for the full range of financial incentives for industry and assistance in training of labour. A small part of the region is a special Development Area. There are sites available and many industries have opened up branch factories in the region and some have moved to the region in their entirety. Probably all have been influenced by the lack of congestion in the region, including the relatively light traffic on the roads, the scenery and the easy access to recreational activities, the coast and the countryside. The attractions for industry and tourism are much the same and grants and loans are available for new hotel accommodation and for specific tourist projects.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The region comprises the area of the county of Fife which ceased to exist on 16th May 1975:

Fife Region is a peninsula in the east of Scotland, bounded on the north by the Firth of Tay, on the east by the North Sea, on the south by the Firth of Forth and on the west by the Central and Tayside Regions. It is a region with a long, varied coastline and a generally undulating relief which is punctuated by the Lomond Hills and the broad plain of the Howe of Fife. The area of about 500 square miles is divided into three districts—Dunfermline, Kirkcaldy and North East Fife. Glenrothes New Town, separately administered by a Development Corporation, is located in the north of the Kirkcaldy District.
At one time, Fife's economy was dominated by coalmining, but in recent years industry has diversified and coal is not so important as formerly. Among the newer industries are electronics, light and marine engineering, metal fabrication and chemicals sectors. In the last ten years growth, as a result of electronics and North Sea oil, has helped to produce a more balanced economy. Agriculture is most important in the Howe of Fife and on the fringes of the Firth of Forth.

Fife has many historical associations. At Tentsmuir is the site of the earliest evidence of man's residence in Scotland. Dunfermline was the burial place of eight Scottish kings, including Malcolm Canmore (1093) and Robert the Bruce (1329) and the birthplace of the industrialist/philanthropist, Andrew Carnegie. Kirkcaldy was the birthplace of the economist, Adam Smith, while the Palace at Falkland was a favourite home of Scottish kings. St. Andrews has been the ecclesiastical centre of Scotland, the seat of Scotland's oldest University (1411) and has the most famous Golf Course in the world, where the Royal and Ancient Golf Club was founded in 1754.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The region comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 16th May 1975:
the county of the city of Aberdeen;
the county of Aberdeen;
the county of Kincardine;
the county of Banff;
the county of Moray (except the burgh of Grantown-on-Spey; the district of Cromdale).

The Grampian region comprises an area of widely differing topography and scenery, ranging as it does from the high granite plateaux of the Cairngorms to the fertile coastal plains of Moray, Banff and the Mearns.

Considerable climatic variation exists in the region, which varies in altitude from sea level to over 4,000 ft., and generalization is impossible. Rainfall varies from about 60 inches in the highland areas to approximately 25 inches on the coastal areas of the Moray Firth. Winter snows on the Cairngorms can persist until May and June, a fact of importance to the expanding winter sports industry. Temperature variations at Aberdeen range from an average mean minimum of −2° (32°F) to an average mean maximum of 17°C (62·8°F).

The region's industry is broadly based and includes agriculture, fishing, food processing, malt whisky distilling, papermaking, textiles, boat-building, marine and general engineering.

In addition, in recent years, the ports of Aberdeen and Peterhead have become important centres for the administration, service and supply of Britain's offshore oil industry and the Region supports a rapidly-growing industrial sector oriented towards offshore oil technology.

Aberdeen is the administrative capital of the region and houses the University (founded 1494), Technical Colleges and Research Institutes in addition to being the main centre for medical, distributive and professional services.

Chairman's annual allowance: £3,000.

Parliamentary Constituency: Orkney and Zetland.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The region comprises the area of the County of Orkney which ceased to exist on 16th May 1975.

The Orkney Islands lie on latitude 59 degrees north and are the second most northerly group of islands in the United Kingdom, being separated from the Scottish Mainland by a seven-mile stretch of the Pentland Firth. There are three main groupings, the north isles, south isles and the largest island known as the mainland. There are two towns, Kirkwall, the capital and administrative centre, and Stromness.

The islands are rich in historical interest and archaeological sites and many of these are of significance in the National and, in fact, European context. Best known are the chambered cairn of Maeshowe dating from 2,000 B.C., the stone-age village of Skara Brae and the magnificent St. Magnus Cathedral which is owned by the people of Kirkwall as a result of a Royal Charter in 1486.

The predominant industry in the county is agriculture, with the principal production of beef stock and dairy products, which include Orkney butter and cheese. There is also a local bacon factory. Other vital industries to the community are fishing, which is one of the growth industries, boat-building, tourism, distilling, knitwear and crafts.

Educationally, the islands are well served with primary schools in all the main areas and full secondary education provided in Kirkwall and Stromness. Medical services include a full range of hospital facilities in Kirkwall and doctors and district nurses covering the principal centres of population. An air ambulance service to Aberdeen is also in operation.

Recreational facilities include two eighteen-hole golf courses, free loch fishing, sea angling, tennis, badminton, squash, sailing, swimming, football, rugby, etc. There are two indoor swimming baths and first-class indoor sports facilities in Kirkwall. There are local clubs participating in sub-aqua, motor cycling and scrambling. For the less athletic, there are opportunities for nature study and ornithology, an excellent library system and the islands' only cinema, which is in Kirkwall.
Chairman's annual allowance: £1,000.

Gas Region: Scottish.

Health District: Glasgow No. 1 (Western).

Parliamentary Constituencies (2): Central Dunbartonshire, East Dunbartonshire.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The district comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 16th May 1975:

in the county of Dunbarton—

the burghs of Bearsden, Milngavie; that part of the electoral division of Hardgate lying within the parish of New Kilpatrick.

The Council's jurisdiction covers a compact area lying generally 6 to 12 miles north-west of the City of Glasgow. It took over two well-established burghs, mainly residential in character, but with a sizeable amount of light industry, principally in the Milngavie area. The landward part is sparsely populated but covers about half the acreage of the district and takes in a major industrial development at Douglas Muir Quarry and a major switching station of the South of Scotland Electricity and North of Scotland Hydro-Electric Boards. Recreationally the district includes seven golf courses, with a further course and leisure complex planned by private developers at Dougalston, Milngavie. A major swimming pool/sports complex at Burnbrae, Bearsden, inherited from the former local authorities is now operational. There are also private football, rugby, cricket and tennis clubs.

Historically, the district coincides with the ancient parish of New Kilpatrick. Perhaps the main historical relics are the sections of the Roman Antonine Wall, which may be traced at New Kilpatrick cemetery. Recent excavations have uncovered the remains of a Roman bath-house in the grounds of a demolished villa in the aptly named Roman Road, Bearsden. This is now regarded as the major antiquarian find made in Scotland over very many years.

Provosts' annual allowance: £1,000.

The district has historical associations with Robert the Bruce, and through Alloa Tower being the home of former Earls of Mar, with Mary Queen of Scots and King James VI. DEFINITION OF AREA

The district comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 16th May, 1975:
in the county of Ayr—the burghs of Ardrossan, Irvine, Kilwinning, Largs, Saltcoats, Stevenston; the districts of Irvine, Kilbirnie, West Kilbride; those parts of the designated area of Irvine New Town within the Ayr and Kilmarnock districts; in the county of Bute—the burgh of Millport; the districts of Arran, Cumbrae.

Cunninghame District includes the designated area of Irvine New Town (Britain's only New Town by the sea) which is planned to grow from its present population of 49,000 to a population of 120,000. It also contains the Hunterston area which is marked by a unique combination of very deep water with good marine approaches in the immediate vicinity of flat land and which is being developed as a major marine terminal for iron ore; for the making and finishing of iron and steel; and for the construction of exploration and production platforms for the North Sea Oil industry. It also contains the North Ayrshire coast and the islands of Cumbrae and Arran, all of which together comprise one of the most important tourist areas of Scotland.

These and other features present the District Council with major problems, but also with major opportunities for the worthwhile exercise of their planning, housing, leisure and recreation and other statutory functions which the District Council intends to seize and use to the full.

Gas Region: Scottish.
Electricity Board (2): part North & part South of Scotland.
Health District: Dumbarton (Argyll and Clyde).

Parliamentary Constituency: Dumbarton West.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The district comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 16th May 1975:

in the county of Dunbarton—the burghs of Dumbarton, Cove and Kilcreggan, Helensburgh; the districts of Helensburgh, Vale of Leven; the electoral divisions of Bowling, Dunbarton.

Dumbarton is situated on the north bank of the Clyde, 15 miles from Glasgow. It has a population of over 25,000. The town has excellent transport to Glasgow either by electric "blue" or by dual carriageway road, the A82, which is also the road to the west, Loch Lomond and the Highlands. Dumbarton is a busy town and although ship-building ceased in 1964 Dumbarton met the challenge of the situation and to-day provides a variety of industry which does not detract from its character as the county town. Dumbarton has re-developed the old town centre and a pleasant shopping precinct has been provided. Over 2,000 houses have been built on estates on the perimeter of the town and new modern schools have been provided. Dumbarton has the advantage of being situated in an area of outstanding scenic beauty and provides urban and rural amenities which make it a most attractive town in which to live and work.

Located on the north side of the Clyde Estuary approximately 8 miles from Dumbarton and 23 miles from Glasgow, Helensburgh is a small and attractive seaside town with a population of some 14,000 persons.

In addition to acting as a resident area for commuters to the Glasgow area, Helensburgh also serves as a tourism and recreation centre. An 18-hole golf course is one of the many attractions of the town, as is the proximity of Loch Lomond and other equally beautiful locations which offer the residents of Helensburgh unlimited opportunities for the enjoyment of the countryside.

The town itself has a distinctive grid-iron street layout incorporating a fine town square which forms part of the busy commercial centre. A wide variety of high-quality old and new buildings interspersed with pleasant town parks and open spaces are found throughout the town.

The burgh of Cove and Kilcreggan, which for so long has appeared to the visitor to be a sleepy, pleasant western outpost to Dunbarton County has, in recent years, begun to stir. More and more people appear to have realized the possibility of commuter travel from this area to the industrial and commercial centres farther up the river. There is a steamer service at Kilcreggan which ensures easy access to the area by sea as well as by road.

Alexandria is the central township of the five original settlements of Renton, Alexandria, Balloch, Jamestown and Bonhill, which over the past 200 years have coalesced into one elongated urban area extending for about $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles along both sides of the River Leven. The Burgh of Dumbarton lies $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles to the south of Alexandria, and Balloch, on the southern shore of Loch Lomond, is situated 1 mile to the north.

In its capacity as district centre for the Vale of Leven Area, Alexandria provides the main shopping facilities for the 25,000 resident population of the catchment area. Two major roads presently converge in the centre of the town—the Glasgow–Inverness Trunk Road, Route A82 (which will shortly be diverted to the west of the town by means of a bypass), and Route A812 which leads from Dumbarton through Renton along the east side of the River Leven.

An extensive programme of redevelopment has been undertaken by the local authority during the past 15 years to secure the replacement of many of the older sub-standard properties throughout the Vale of Leven area and further such improvement schemes are planned. Alexandria in particular has been the subject of comprehensive redevelopment projects which has considerably improved the environment of the town and the first phase of the new traffic-free shopping centre is now nearing completion.

Provost's annual allowance: £1,500.

in the county of Angus—
  the burgh of Monifieth; the district of Monifieth (except the electoral division of Newtyle and Kettins);

In the twelfth century Dundee was made a Royal Burgh by King William the Lion, and its ancient rights were re-established by a Charter of King Robert the Bruce in 1327. The Great Charter of Charles I, dated 14th September 1641, finally confirmed these rights.

Dundee is one of the four large cities in Scotland, and second in importance in respect of commerce. The town is well built, of handsome appearance, with wide streets, and has a grand two-mile esplanade, commodious docks and shipbuilding yards, large engineering works, flax, jute, plastic and brick factories; also preserve, canning and confectionery works. Dundee is remarkable for its educational institutions, which now include a University, also ancient and modern architecture and ornamental parks. Within the boundaries of the district there are 30 parks and open spaces, the total area amounting to 4,300 acres. The Mills Observatory, an up-to-date observatory, has been erected on Balgay Hill and is open to the public. The Council takes part in the administration of the Charities, appoints a harbour trustee, representatives to the Dundee College of Education, etc., maintains markets, slaughterhouses, public baths, washhouses, dispensary, parks and cemeteries, public libraries, art and sculpture galleries, museums and housing estates.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The district comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 16th May 1975:

in the county of Renfrew
  the burghs of Gourock, Greenock, Port Glasgow; the Fifth district.

The Headquarters of the district are in the Parliamentary Burgh of Greenock. Greenock was elevated to a Burgh of Barony in 1635 and its first magistrates and council were elected in 1751. The foundation stone of the present municipal buildings was laid in 1881. These buildings are an excellent example of the re-discovery of classical taste in the late Victorian era and are well worth a visit, particularly the very fine ceremonial interior of the Council Chambers. There are many fine views and in particular the one from the Cross of Lorraine Memorial (erected by the French authorities to the seamen of France who gave their lives in the Battle of the Atlantic) on the Lyle Hill is possibly the finest in the West of Scotland. The redevelopment of the town centre began in 1967 and work is still in progress. The chief industries are shipbuilding, engineering, sugar refining, worsted and woollen manufacturing and electronics. Industry, it is confidently forecast, will be attracted to the new industrial estates in the east and adjoining the waterfront and Larkfield which overlooks the Clyde estuary.

Port Glasgow, the second largest burgh population wise, occupies a pleasant situation on the south bank of the River Clyde where it widens to form the Estuary. The famous shipping channel of the river opposite the town has seen maritime giants such as the three Queens. The principal industries are ship building, the manufacture of textiles, canvas and clothing.

Gourock, the smallest burgh, is a popular seaside resort situated on the Firth of Clyde. It has a first-class eighteen-hole golf course, also an excellent heated open-air swimming pool with accommodation for both sexes. Ash tennis courts, bowling greens, putting greens and a novelty golf course have been laid out.

There are three villages in the district—Inverkip, Wemyss Bay and Kilmacolm. Inverkip has recently seen much private and council house development and there are plans for further building. The Kip marina lies opposite the village and has proved to be very popular with the sailing fraternity. Between Inverkip and Wemyss Bay a South of Scotland Electricity Board Generating Power Station is being built, the tower of which on completion will reach a height of 236 metres from ground level. Wemyss Bay is a residential village. It is from the pier here that a ferry service runs to Rothesay on the Island of Bute and workers are transported to the oil platform construction site at Ardyne. Kilmacolm is a high-quality residential area situated in impressive countryside.

Murshiel Regional Park is in the district; here there are information trails, picnic areas and various other amenities.

Chairman's annual allowance: £1,500.

Gas Region: Scottish.

Parliamentary Constituency: Kilmarnock.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The district comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 16th May, 1975:

in the county of Ayr–
 the burghs of Darvel, Galston, Kilmarnock, Newmilns and Greenholm, Stewarton; the district of Kilmarnock (except that part of the designated area of Irvine New Town within this district).

The largest of the towns in the Kilmarnock and Loudoun District, Kilmarnock is one of the most important industrial towns in the West of Scotland. It is the commercial and industrial capital of Ayrshire and is notable for the variety of industries carried on within its boundaries. These include heavy and light engineering, carpet-making, whisky blending and bottling, shoemaking, knitwear and agricultural machinery and sanitary ware. There are several industrial estates with factories and sites available.

The District Council maintains throughout its area some twelve parks and recreation grounds, a public library, museum and art gallery. There are two golf courses, pitch and putt courses, putting and bowling greens, a leisure centre, public baths, sauna and indoor swimming pool in Kilmarnock owned and operated by the District Council. There are several homes for old people and day nurseries for children. A modern abattoir has been recently opened. A suite of halls is owned by the Council in Kilmarnock, and a well-equipped theatre is administered by the local Arts Guild. In education the District Council is well served by a number of modern schools and a new technical college.

To the east of Kilmarnock is the village of Hurlford and the towns of Galston, Newmilns and Darvel all situated on the banks of the River Irvine. Hurlford has its own industries which include shirt-making, iron-founding and the manufacture of fireclay products. Galston's industrial activities are knitwear, lace- and blacket-making, meat canning and some light engineering. There are good recreational facilities in the town and an excellent golf course in the parkland of Loudoun Castle.

Newmilns, along with Darvel, is the centre of Scotland's lace and madras industry. Recently established are light engineering works and a ceramics factory. Darvel pioneered the lace industry in Scotland and has now largely departed from the use of more traditional materials in favour of terylene and similar man-made fibres. Historically, Darvel has associations with the Covenanters and more recently with the discovery of penicillin through its famous native son Sir Alexander Fleming.

To the north-west of Kilmarnock is Crosshouse, a small industrial community with a tradition of knitwear, agricultural machinery, fireclay and timber goods.

The village of Kilmaurs a few miles north from Kilmarnock is a sixteenth-century village with its town gaol still standing in the main street. Attractively set in rich farmland, it has a large creamery and milk-processing plant, and knitwear factories.

Some miles further north is the town of Stewarton. Historically associated with Macbeth and Malcolm and later as "Covenanting" territory, Stewarton is now a pleasant and busy town well known for its textile products. There are spinners, dyers and weavers making yarns for the carpet trade, and also a thriving hosiery industry, famous for the production of "Scotch" or Stewarton Bonnets. Egg-packing and frozen-food processing has been recently established and a busy cooperage carries out the repairing of whisky casks. Two firms of precision engineers turn out parts for industries all over Britain.

Almost at the northern limit of the district is the attractive village of Dunlop where there are timber works, carpet-yarn spinning and the manufacture of cattle feeding-stuffs.

Gas Region: Scottish.

Health District: East Fife.

Parliamentary Constituencies (3); Kirkcaldy, Central Fife (part), East Fife (part).

DEFINITION OF AREA

The district comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 16th May 1975:

in the county of Fife—

the burghs of Buckhaven and Methil, Burntisland, Kinghorn, Kirkcaldy, Leslie, Leven, Markinch; the districts of Glenrothes, Kirkcaldy (except that part of the electoral division of Auchtertool within the Gray Park polling district), Wemyss; the electoral divisions of Auchterderran, Denend, Kinglassie, New Carden.

Kirkcaldy District is situated on the south coast of Fife, and stretches from Burntisland in the west to Leven in the east. From the coast the District stretches inland to include Leslie, the New Town of Glenrothes and Markinch. The main centres of population are Kirkcaldy, Glenrothes, Buckhaven and Methil, and Leven, and these urban areas form a triangle which takes up the majority of the land area of the District. The remainder of the District is predominantly rural in character. The main Edinburgh to Aberdeen railway line bisects the District with stations at Burntisland, Kinghorn, Kirkcaldy and Markinch.

Throughout the southern and western parts of the District the coal mining industry has left many remains which are gradually being removed or rehabilitated. Over the years the industry in the District has been diversifying away from the previously dominant coal and linoleum industries, and Glenrothes is now a major centre of the electronics industry. There is considerable involvement in the North Sea Oil industry within the District, the two main examples being the Redpath Dorman Long platform yard at Methil, and the Caledonian Platform Structures Ltd. yard at Burntisland. Methil, Kirkcaldy and Burntisland all have commercial ports, while there is a small airfield at Glenrothes.

The District has also proved to be a popular tourist area, with main centres at Burntisland, Kinghorn and Leven. Facilities for tourists are mainly located along the coast, and include several caravan sites and 10 golf courses—four local authority and six private.

Kirkcaldy is the main shopping centre, not only for the District, but also for the Region as a whole, and has a wide range of department and specialist stores. Plans to pedestrianize the main shopping street are seen as enhancing this present popularity.

The new town of Glenrothes also has a large and comprehensive indoor shopping centre.

Convenor's annual allowance: £2,200.

Health District: Motherwell/Lanark (Lanarkshire).

DEFINITION OF AREA

The district comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 16th May, 1975:

in the county of Lanark—
  the burghs of Biggar, Lanark; the First, Second, Third district.

Lanark District extends from the village of Law in the north to Beattock in the south and from Dolphinton in the east to Stonehouse in the west. The greater part of the District is of a rural character and there is extensive sheep grazing in the south where the land is in the nature of 1,000 feet above sea level. The upper waters of the Clyde run through the area and in the valley from Lanark to Crossford intensive fruit cultivation is carried out. The principal towns are Lanark, Biggar, Carluke and Lesmahagow, and in all of these, as also in Douglas and Forth, various light industries are located. A limited amount of coal mining is still carried out, but not so extensively as pre-war. Sand and gravel extraction is worked fairly extensively in the proximity of Carstairs and Carnwath. The M74 and A74 run through the District and Carstairs is an important British Rail junction. Lanark has a weekly auction market which is one of the largest in the country, and is noted for its annual Lanimer Week. There are several conservation areas and the Pentland Hills, part of which lie within the District, form an area of special planning control.

Pop., 85,074; RV, £14,130,000; District Rate, 13p; Debt, £36,493,000; Area, 89,600 Ac.

Baths and Pools: 2; Cemeteries: 17; Council Houses and Flats: 13,020; Libraries: Central: 1 (non-lending); Branch: 8; Parks and Open Spaces; 80.

Gas Region: Scottish.
Electricity Board: South of Scotland.
Health District: South Lothian.

Parliamentary Constituency: Midlothian.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The district comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 15th May, 1975:

in the county of Midlothian—
the burghs of Bonnyrigg and Lasswade, Dalkeith, Loanhead, Penicuik; the districts of Gala Water (except the electoral division of Heriot and Stow), Lasswade, Musselburgh (except the parish of Inveresk), Newbattle, Penicuik.

Midlothian County Council was, heraldically, the Premier County of Scotland, and while historically overshadowed by Edinburgh, the numerous castles—Borthwick, Crichton, Dalhousie and Hawthornden, for example—point to the troublesome times of bygone days. Also within the district's boundaries are Dalkeith Palace, Newbattle Abbey and Rosslyn Chapel.

Geographically, the district lies between the Pentland Hills and the Moorfoots on the west and south, Edinburgh to the north, with the agricultural lands of East Lothian stretching out to the east and the River Esk running through the centre.

It had been estimated some years ago that in the Esk Valley—much of the area of the district—there would be a population increase of some 34,000 by 1990 but this had been reviewed in the light of recent conditions. Nevertheless, since reorganisation of local government in 1974 the district's population had risen by about 2000.

The principal industries of the area were, at one time, coal mining and paper making and both have in recent years contracted, the latter to a more substantial degree than the former. There remain 3 collieries, one of them, Bilston Glen, being among the most modern in the country and producing over 1,000,000 tons of coal annually. In recent years a diversity of new industry has been attracted to the six industrial estates and other individual locations. These include precision engineering, electronics, crystal glass manufacture, computer programming, etc., printing, stationery manufacture, photo processing and whisky bottling and blending.

There is also a diversity of amenities with three golf courses, two indoor swimming pools, and fishing, horse riding and hill-walking facilities available.

Gas Region: Scotland.
Electricity Board: South of Scotland.
Health Board: Dumfries and Galloway.

Parliamentary Constituencies (2): Dumfriesshire (part), Galloway (part).

DEFINITION OF AREA

The district comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 16th May 1975:

in the county of Dumfries—
  the burghs of Dumfries, Sanquhar; the districts of Dumfries (except the parishes of Dalton, Lochmaben), Thornhill, Upper Nithsdale;
in the county of Kirkcudbright—
  the Eastern district.

The district takes its name from the River Nith which runs through much of the area. The name is a historic one for the lands of the Nith Valley. Not only the burghs mentioned below, but also many of the rural communities bear names which have a significant place in the history and development of Scotland throughout the ages.

Nithsdale district is predominantly an agricultural area. The population density is 102 persons per square mile. More than half the population live in the town of Dumfries and its vicinity. There are at this time (1974) two very old Royal Burghs in the area, Dumfries and Sanquhar. Dumfries, the largest town in South-west Scotland, is a market, administrative and commercial centre for much of Dumfries and Galloway. Much of the industrial development in the district is in the Dumfries area. The Sanquhar area in the north has diversified modern industries which have largely taken over the role of the mining industry. Throughout the district agriculture and forestry, and industries associated with or serving these, also provide substantial employment. The tourist industry, though still seasonal, is also a growing source of employment.

Chairman's annual allowance: £500.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The district comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 16th May 1975:
the county of Kinross;
in the county of Angus—
  the parish of Kettins;
in the county of Perth—
  the burghs of Aberfeldy, Abernethy, Alyth, Auchterarder, Blairgowrie and Rattray, Coupar Angus, Crieff, Perth, Pitlochry; the districts Central (except the parish of Muckhart), Eastern, Highland, Perth (except the electoral division of Longforgan); the electoral division of Ardoch.

Historical. The City of Perth was the ancient capital of Scotland. The area has been the scene of much that is vital in Scotland's history from the distant days of the Roman occupation to the present-day development of hydro-electric power. The area contains the sites of many historic battles and is the home of one of the greatest of Scottish regiments, the Black Watch. There is much evidence of relics of the past—ruined castles, Pictish forts, Roman encampments—as well as castles, abbeys, churches and great houses still in use.

Geographical and Industrial features. The area extends to 2,022 square miles, the second largest district council area in Scotland. The area contains almost every type of scenery to make it a microcosm of Scotland. It has great mountains, rolling farmlands, beautiful lochs and rivers, wide, high moorlands, hills of heather and pine, woodlands and waterfalls. Through it runs the longest river in Scotland and unquestionably the finest and most varied scenically, namely, the River Tay, which has unrivalled salmon fishing in its lower regions. There are ample facilities for the sportsman, particularly in fishing and golf. Facilities for salmon- and trout-fishing are extensive and there are many fine golf courses, including Gleneagles Hotel course. Shooting facilities are extensive—there are 100,000 acres of deer forest alone and the grouse moors are among the best in Scotland. In the bigger centres there are ample facilities for tennis and bowls and the mountaineer has every type of terrain offering an endless variety ranging from the simple scramble; while in the winter ski-ing and curling are provided for all. There are two theatres, one at Perth and one at Pitlochry.

Industrial. The main industries of the area are agriculture, tourism, dyeing, glass and linen manufacture and whisky distilling.

Provost's annual allowance: £2,000.

Parliamentary Constituency (1): Roxburgh, Selkirk and Peebles.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The district comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 16th May 1975:

in the county of Berwick
  the parish of Nenthorn;
in the county of Roxburgh
  the burghs of Hawick, Jedburgh, Kelso; the districts of Hawick, Jedburgh, Kelso; that part of the parish of Roxburgh within the district of Melrose.

The district of Roxburgh is entirely inland with 75 miles of its eastern and southern boundaries forming part of the Border Line. The thirty seven parishes come within the bounds and under the supervision of the Presbytery of Jedburgh

The area is drained by the River Teviot and its tributaries joining the Tweed at Kelso, while the western confines depend on the Liddel Water flowing to the Solway. The type of terrain varies greatly from the high hills of the Cheviots to the pastoral slopes and fertile river valleys of Lower Teviotdale.

The geological history of Roxburgh ranges from the glacial gravels and boulder clays to the sandstones and shales of the Silurian period, with intrusions of igneous rocks protruding through the older sandstone deposits to produce an infinite variety of rocks and soils. The rough pastures of the higher hills are devoted to sheep and cattle farming, while afforestation, both by the Forestry Commission and private developers, continues to reduce hill farm acreage. The lower grounds in the river valleys provide excellent arable and general-purpose farming for stock feeds and market produce.

While agriculture is the predominant industry, the woollen trade figures largely in the district's economy, particularly in Hawick with its large knitwear and tweed factories. Light engineering and agricultural machinery, forestry and several other smaller labour-employing industries flourish throughout the district while industrial sites have been provided for in the larger centres to attract incoming firms and encourage expansion in existing ones.

Roxburgh is exceedingly rich in its historical associations from the earliest times, with traces and relics of the Roman, Saxon and Norman occupations, along with the Abbeys of Kelso and Jedburgh, and the many castles and peel towers scattered throughout the district.

All kinds of sports are catered for in the many public parks and recreation grounds with rugby football enjoying the greatest public support, while there are indoor swimming pools at Hawick, Jedburgh and Kelso, and a curling rink at the last named. There are five golf courses within the district as well as tennis courts in the larger centres and many bowling greens. Other available activities include hunting, pony trekking, fishing, hill walking and climbing. On the cultural side, there are societies for the historically minded, with art, photographic, music, drama and operatic societies all receiving good support.

Chairman's annual allowance: £1,000.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The district comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 16th May 1975:

in the county of Inverness—
  the district of Skye;
in the county of Ross and Cromarty
  the South West district.

On 1st April 1976 part of Lochaber District, comprising the Glenelg, Arnisdale and Barrisdale areas, was transferred to Skye and Lochalsh District following a boundary review.

The area is of great scenic importance and is a favourite holiday haunt for tourists. Portree in Skye and Kyle of Lochalsh on the mainland are the main centres of population.

Skye and Lochalsh is a district, centring on forestry, fishing, tourism and crofting. The Inverness–Kyle railway, is a line of great scenic value and attracts many tourists during the summer.

The Royal Navy have established a base in Kyle for the purpose of torpedo-testing in the Inner Sound of Raasay. This base continues to expand and will provide many opportunities of employment for local people.

A major concrete oil platform construction facility is established just outside the district at Loch Kishorn. Within Skye and Lochalsh there are related shipping and quarrying activities.

The Island of Skye is a very popular rendezvous for visitors and during the particular months of July and August is usually bursting at the seams with all nationalities. Favourite recreations are hill walking, climbing, golfing and fishing. The area is steeped in history and several interesting castles, Pictish brochs, etc., can be visited.

The climate is mild, being influenced by the Gulf Stream, and although rainfall is higher than the national average rarely does snow affect communications.

DEFINITION OF AREA

The district comprises the areas of the following local authorities which ceased to exist on 16th May 1975:

in the county of Kirkcudbright—
  the burghs of Castle Douglas, Dalbeattie, Gatehouse of Fleet, Kirkcudbright, New Galloway; the districts of Castle Douglas, Dalbeattie, Glenkens, Kirkcudbright; the electoral division of Anwoth and Girthon.

The area of the Stewartry district council comprises the area of the present Stewartry of Kirkcudbright with the exception of two parishes in the west and five parishes in the east which are now in other districts.

The title of "Stewartry" dates from the fourteenth century, when Archibald the Grim received, in perpetual fee, all the Crown Lands in Galloway between the Rivers Nith and Cree and appointed a steward to collect his revenues and administer justice.

The wealth and prosperity of the district is derived mainly from agriculture and its ancillary industries, and from forestry and (to a lesser extent) from tourism and manufacturing industries.

The district enjoys many natural geographical advantages which are denied many parts of the United Kingdom, and areas of great scenic value, of great diversity, which could provide a complementary source of prosperity if carefully developed.

GOVERNMENT

Following the fall of the Northern Ireland Executive, appointed under the Northern Ireland Constitutional Act 1973, temporary provision was made by the Northern Ireland Act 1974 for the government of Northern Ireland to be exercised by the Secretary of State.

The Act also provided for the Dissolution of the existing Northern Ireland Assembly and for the election and holding of a Constitutional Convention in Northern Ireland.

The Northern Ireland Assembly was dissolved on 27th March 1975 and the election of 78 members to the Constitutional Convention took place on 1 May 1975.

The Rt. Hon. Sir Robert Lowry was appointed Chairman of the Convention.

The Convention which had the purpose of considering what provision for the government of Northern Ireland was likely to command the most widespread acceptance throughout the community there, reported on 8 November 1975.

The Convention was reconvened on 3 February 1976 so that it might be determined whether agreement could be reached on a specific and crucial issue of a system of government within Northern Ireland which provided for a form of partnership and participation.

No further report was made and the Convention was dissolved on 5 March 1976.

Direct Rule continues in being under the terms of the Northern Ireland Act 1974

REORGANIZATION OF LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Prior to re-organization in 1973, local government in Ulster was similar in most respects to the system existing in England and Wales, the number of local authorities then being:

County Councils	6 (a)
County Boroughs	2 (b)
Boroughs	9
Urban Districts	25
Rural Districts	26

(a) One (Fermanagh) was an all-purposes authority.
(b) Londonderry was a Development Commission.

On 1st October 1973 these authorities were replaced by 26 District Councils and 9 Area Boards. In addition certain functions, previously the responsibility of local authorities, were transferred to government departments. There are now no county councils in Northern Ireland.

District council members are elected for a term of four years and the experiment of using proportional representation by means of a single transferable vote was introduced at the first elections.

The next elections of District Council members will take place in May, 1981.

Shaping your future . . .
technically

During 1977 ME changed shape and frequency but not direction. The King-size ME is published alternate Tuesdays, retaining the urgency and topicality of a news-magazine without the time-lag of a monthly. Its message, loud and clear for 103 years, is now presented more clearly and more loudly than ever before. Our editorial team, with it's combination of knowledge, technical expertise and journalistic skills is backed by a large number of distinguished outside contributors enabling ME to monitor the day-by-day developments in local government wherever they occur and report, without fear of controversy, everything of value to technical officers working for local authorities and other public undertakings.

SECTION 39

LOCAL GOVERNMENT IN THE ISLES

THE ISLE OF MAN

An island in the Irish Sea, in lat. 54° 3–54° 25 N, and long. 4° 18′–4° 47 W, nearly equi-distant from England, Scotland and Ireland. The total land area is 141,263 acres (221 sq. miles), with a resident population in April 1976 of 60,496.

Agriculture 1977: Under crops 79,290 acres; Rough grazing 41,623 acres; Corn 292; Oats 2938; Wheat 931; Barley 7,905; Turnips 1,298; Potatoes 936; Hay 14,343, Grass 47,915 acres.

Livestock. Horses 837, Cattle 39,188; Sheep 99,154; Pigs 4,395.

Workers (including self-employed). Agriculture and Fishing, 1,278; Manufacturing, 2,955; Building, 3,286; Public Utilities and Transport, 2,645; Wholesaling and Retailing, 3,549; Professional and Financial, 4,625; Tourist Accommodation, 1,124; Other, 3,767.

The Island's traditional industries are agriculture, fishing and tourism, which attracts about 400,000 holidaymakers each summer. Manufacturing industry, banking and other financial services have, however, recently become the most important contributors to the Manx economy.

The government provides a wide range of services including a national health service, social security benefits similar to those provided in the United Kingdom, education services, is responsible for roads, builds houses to rent and advances loans for house purchase. Loans and grants are also available to assist manufacturing industry, the tourist industry and the agriculture and fishing industries. Trading undertakings such as airports, harbours, electric railway, gas and electricity are controlled by the government.

Government. The Isle of Man is governed by a Legislature, called Tynwald, consisting of two branches –the Legislative Council and the House of Keys. The Council consists of the Lieutenant Governor, the Bishop of Sodor and Man, the Attorney General, and 8 members appointed by the House of Keys. The House of Keys (possibly from the Scandinavian keise choose) is one of the most ancient legislative assemblies in the world. It consists of 24 members, elected by the adult male and female population, 13 from the six sheadings, 7 from Douglas, 2 from Ramsey and 1 each from Castletown and Peel. Bills after having passed both Houses are signed by the members, and then sent for the Royal Assent. After receiving the Royal Assent, a Bill does not become law unless promulgated within the ensuing twelve months, and on the first "Tynwald Day" (5th July) following it is announced in the English and Manx languages on the Tynwald Hill. On the promulgation taking place a certificate thereof is signed by the Governor and the Speaker of the House of Keys.

Finance. The main sources of taxation are customs and excise duties, social security taxes which are levied at the same rates as in the United Kingdom and income tax. The standard rate of income tax is 21·25%; personal allowances are usually higher than those given in the United Kingdom. No surtax is payable and no death duties are levied.

A property rate is levied to recover a proportion of government expenditure on education, highways, fire service and drainage and expenditure of local authorities.

ISLES OF SCILLY

Pop., 2,430; RV, £291,641; Rate, 66·75p; Debt, £1,630,000.

The Council of the Isles of Scilly is administratively unique in the United Kingdom, having all the powers and duties of a County Council and a District Council. These are derived from Section 292 of the Local Government Act, 1933, all legislation being specifically applied to the Islands by Special Order. Education, Planning, Highways, Fire Services and Social Services are all administered by the Council and there are arrangements with Cornwall County Council for other services like libraries. The Devon and Cornwall Police Authority, of which the Council is a Constituent Member, administers the Police. The islands appoint one member to sit on the Cornwall and Isles of Scilly Area Health Authority and one to the Family Practitioner Committee. These bodies meet in Cornwall. The Isles of Scilly have their own separate Community Health Council which meets and is administered on St. Mary's. There are at present four primary schools in use on the islands, a comprehensive school on St. Mary's together with a boarding hostel for children from the other islands who reside during the week. Pupils transfer to mainland establishments for sixth form and other further education. St. Mary's and Tresco are served by water and sewerage systems and the island of Bryher has a mains water supply. The 1972 Local Government Act not applying to the islands, the Council retains its four Aldermen in addition to whom there are 21 Councillors. The islands form part of the St. Ives Electoral Division.

There are five inhabited islands in the Area of the Council, the whole of which has been designated both as a Conservation Area and as an Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty. The islands attract substantial tourist traffic which contributes fundamentally to their economy. The local flora and fauna are considered by the Nature Conservancy Council to be of National Nature Reserve Status. The extreme south-westerly maritime environment supports a unique natural history with a number of species of plants, animals and birds which do not occur on the mainland and others which occur only rarely. The wild life and geographical features of the area are protected by the Wardening Service of the Duchy of Cornwall with help and advice from the Nature Conservancy Council. All the uninhabited islands and large areas of those which are inhabited are scheduled as sites of Special Scientific Interest and are treated as sanctuaries. There are restrictions on entry to some areas in breeding seasons. On St. Mary's there is a small but distinguished Museum of Scillonian history, pre-history and natural history.

LATE SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION

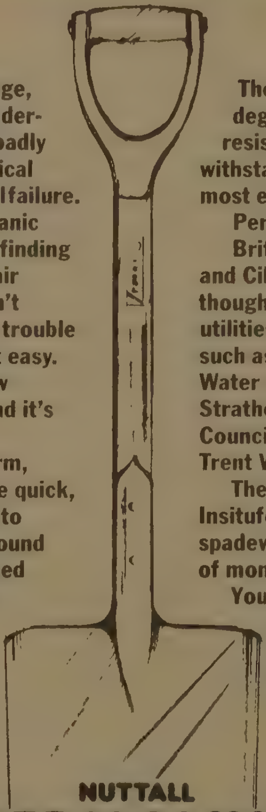
The shovel

A great invention till we arrived



In this day and age, it's easy to find underground pipework badly damaged by chemical attack or structural failure.

But when the panic button is pressed, finding an immediate repair method that doesn't involve the time or trouble of excavation isn't easy.

Except that now you've found it. And it's remarkable.

Called Insituform, all it involves is the quick, simple insertion into pipework, from ground level, of a reinforced resin inner lining.

(It's been designed for pipework from 100mm to 1 metre diameter).

The new pipe has a high degree of chemical resistance and will withstand attack from most effluents.

Persuasive stuff.

British Steel, ICI, Fisons and Ciba-Geigy have thought so. So have public utilities and authorities such as CEGB, Thames Water Authority, Strathclyde Regional Council and the Severn/Trent Water Authority.

They've proved that Insituform cuts down on spadework, time and a lot of money.

You can too. Just fill in the coupon (or write) and we'll return the facts about Insituform.

They are well worth reading

PASSENGER TRANSPORT MANAGERS

It had previously been agreed in principle to transfer those Passenger Transport Managers currently paid on vehicle-mileage based scales to population-based scales of their employing authorities at the level of F-1, F-2 or F-3.

Authorities are to use their discretion to select a scale within this range, calculated in accordance with the Agreement. The appropriate scale should then be extended downwards by amounts equivalent to the normal increment for the new scale (i.e. £240 or £282 depending on the authorities' population), and from 1st July 1978 the Passenger Transport Manager should be assimilated to the appropriate next point on this temporarily extended scale above his existing salary. In some cases this will mean a personal assimilation salary for the time being below the minimum of the ultimate salary scale selected. On 1st April 1979 he should receive a full increment and will then proceed each 1st April to receive an increment until the maximum of the new scale is reached.

ADMINISTRATIVE, PROFESSIONAL, TECHNICAL AND CLERICAL STAFF (ENGLAND AND WALES)

Revised Spinal Column Point Salaries

Revised spinal column point salaries have been agreed, together with details as to the salaries payable to staff aged 16 and 17 years and the continued payment of the £312 annual salary supplement (£261 for officers aged 17 and £207 for officers aged 16). The earnings supplement introduced at 1st July 1977 ceased to be payable with effect from 1st July 1978.

Except as otherwise provided for, all staff will remain on their existing spinal column point.

Salaries of officers above the level of PO Range 2

Officers within purview of the National Council who are graded above the level provided in Principal Officers' Range 2 shall have their salary scales revised on the following basis:

(1) The new minimum of a particular scale shall be ascertained by
  (i) adding to the existing scale minimum the Stage 2 earnings supplement of £208 p.a. currently being paid and a further supplement of £312 p.a. (regardless of whether or not this is actually being paid under the Stage 1 salary agreement);
  (ii) adding to that figure a sum equal to 9·94 per cent;
  (iii) deducting from the total figure the supplement of £312 p.a.
  (iv) rounding down the resultant figure to the nearest multiple of £3. This figure becomes the new minimum of the scale.

(2) the existing increments are to be increased by 9·94 per cent rounded down to the nearest multiple of £3 and added to the revised minimum salary to establish the new scale.

In addition to the revised scales a supplement of £312 p.a. shall be paid to all officers. The supplement shall be counted for the purposes of holiday pay and sickness pay but not for any other purposes. The earnings supplement introduced at 1st July 1977 ceases to be payable with effect from 1st July 1978.

The revised spinal column point salaries from 1st July 1978:—

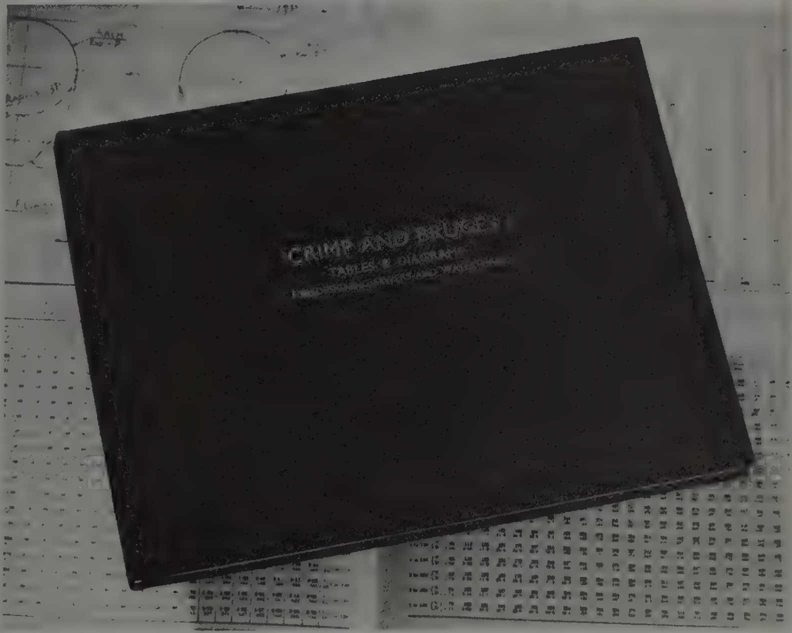
CRIMP & BRUGES

- a pipe-dream brought to reality



These well-known Tables and Diagrams for use in designing sewers and water mains have familiar imperial tables facing their equivalent in the metric form. A table of proportional values for "new form" egg-shaped sewers has been added, also the percentages which must be subtracted to obtain values for these sewers from figures calculated for "old-form" egg-shaped sewers.
